Hillel makes plans for new facility

Hillel officials hope to create a more modern and welcoming facility, which they hope to open in 2002.

Community House Dean Brownlee said that the current building, built in the 1930s, occupies approximately 11,000 square feet. The next-to-be-constructed facility will likely be more modern and efficient in design, he said.

Firm hired to study Health Sys. finances

A consulting firm, the Hunter Group is known for its in-depth, thinking fiscally challenged hospitals cut their deficits.

By Eric Tucker

The University of Pennsylvania Health System has hired the Hunter Group, a St. Petersburg, Fla.-based consulting firm, to assess the financially troubled system's current operations and recommend ways in which it can better utilize resources.

The firm, which deals primarily with health-care systems that are having financial deficits, works to help hospitals realize their potential by streamlining their expenditures and increasing their revenue.

Hillel makes plans for new facility

Hillel officials are meeting with architects and engineers to discuss the plans for the building and begin designing the current building renovates.

Once a final proposal has been drafted, Hillel will solicit bids that will be considered and evaluated.

Hildebrand, who was diagnosed with cancer last summer, taught undergraduates and graduate students throughout his 34-year career at Penn. Despite his illness, he continued teaching through the fall semester, a decision his colleagues consider courageous and honorable.

"He was a very talented fellow who could do just about anything he could put his mind to," Brownlee said.

A new building for Hillel will benefit not only the Penn Jewish community, but also the University student body.

Major construction projects continue across campus. The new Vhaorton building is nearing completion and is scheduled to open in the spring. The new building will house the College of Business Administration, the College of Arts and Sciences, and the School of Engineering.

Construction continues on the new athletic facilities as well. The new athletic facilities will house the men’s and women’s basketball teams, as well as the men’s and women’s tennis teams. The new facilities are scheduled to open in the fall.

The new athletic facilities will be a major improvement over the current facilities. The new facilities will be more modern and will provide a more comfortable environment for the athletes and fans.

Construction on new Hillel facility could start next year

Hillel has worked through the last 15 years to address the space concerns on campus, removing the building itself in 1983 and helping create the Jewish Activities Center in the Quadrangle three years ago. But the creation of an entirely new facility represents the most ambitious effort made to date to provide more space for the Jewish community on campus — a community that has long outgrown the space of its current home. Quarterback position still unsettled

Transfer Gavin Hoffman is one of five contenders in Penn's quarterback battle.

By Jason Bodnar

Penn football fans are getting ready for the third year of the Sandy Barbour era. The Quakers' quarterback battle is one of the most intriguing storylines entering the 2000 season. Senior Mike King, the only returning starter, is battling for the starting job against sophomores Jared Barron and Ryan Lazzeri, and freshmen Kevin King and Michael Hoops.

Penn's starting quarterback will be named in the early stages of fall camp, and coach Michael Dowd said it could be weeks before a decision is made.

"I think the competition has been good," Dowd said. "First the guys are fighting for the starting position. Then they have to fight for the backup position. So, I don't think there's a favorite right now." The competition for the starting job is expected to continue into the regular season, when the team opens the season with a Sept. 16 home game against Fresno State.

Dowd said the competition is healthy and that the players are working hard to improve their skills.

The next few weeks will be crucial in determining the starting quarterback, but Dowd said it's not a one-game decision.

"It's a step by step process," Dowd said. "We'll see how they do in the next few games, and then we'll make a decision."

Penn's quarterbacks have struggled in recent years, with no starting quarterback being named in each of the last three seasons.

The Quakers' quarterback battle is one of several key storylines entering the 2000 season. The team is looking to improve on its 5-6 record from last season, and the addition of King and Barron to the starting quarterback battle is expected to help.

Construction to begin on baseball field

The new Quakers baseball stadium, slated for a March opening, will be located on the old Murphy Field site.

By Jason Bodnar

The new stadium will be located at the intersection of University Avenue and Civic Center Boulevard, with the left field portion of the stadium located on the old Murphy Field site.

"The stadium will be located just north of the intersection of University Avenue and Civic Center Boulevard," said Joe Raia, who is project manager for the stadium. "The stadium will be built behind home plate and along the first and third base lines, utilizing a seat-back design, rather than the bench style seating of Modern Field.

"The stadium will have an open concourse behind the first base stand that can be used for parking." The new baseball stadium, which is expected to be completed by the end of February, will be built behind home plate and along the first and third base lines, utilizing a seat-back design, rather than the bench style seating of Modern Field.
