Penn Natl. Commission meets at U.

The high-profile group was convened by Judith Rodin to study inactivity.

By Eric Tucker

In films, moviestars often prefer acting-heavy roles with straightforward action and close-cut heroes and villains.

Regardless, similarly, Americans often prefer dramas to quotidian issues and are more interested in which politicians win and which lose than in how they get there.

So said renowned movie critic Neal Gabler yesterday as he introduced about 35 members of the Penn National Commission on Society, Culture and Community. Gabler's talk was convened by Judith Rodin.

"I'm not, so far as I know, a candidate," Rodin said yesterday to a crowd of 200 who wanted to hear her speak at length about the movement known as El Movimiento Estudiantil Chicano de la Raza.

According to Cantu, the University could afford its costs if it were to consider its campus on a larger scale.

The La Casa Latina Director Libby Soto said she received a letter from Rodin when the center opened which stated that the facility would retain its status at its current location for many years.

"What is going to shape people's opinions about how we will handle this center now rather than later."

Rodin was ranked seventh on the list.

On the one hand, I find it very troubling (because it is important to have a permanent location that we can consider our home on Penn's campus," Cantu added.

is the most fundamental requirement of Imaan. (Compilation of the works of Ibn Taymiyah). by Dr. Muhammad Naim Yasin.

The fourth component of Imaan is faith in the Prophets and Messengers. Which means believing in every one of the prophets and messengers that Allah, Great and Glorious is He, mentions in the Quran for: “there was never a people, without a warner having lived among them” (35:24). There are 25 prophets and messengers mentioned in the Quran. Among those who are mentioned are: Adam, Noah, Hadr, Abraham, Hud, Lot, Jonah, Isma'il, Isaac, Jacob, Joseph, Japheth, Moses, Aaron, Elephas, Nath, David, Zakariyya, Solomon, Elia, John, Jesus and Muhammad - May the prayers and blessings of Allah be upon them all. All of them were inspired with the same message: Li Ilaha ill Huwa - There is no God but God. For a person to deny the legitimacy of any of these prophets is tantamount to disbelief. As for the prophets of mentioned in the Holy Qur'an, they must be accepted if they are included in the authentic traditions or sayings of the Prophet Muhammad (PBUH).

Faith in the Prophets and Messengers means believing that among men, the prophets were the most perfect in knowledge and deed, the most honest and the most perfect of character; that Allah, Great and Glorious is He, blessed them with excellent attributes unparalleled before or since.

Faith in the Day of Resurrection also falls under the bounds of Imaan and secures a place as one of the key components of Imaan. This is essentially a firm conviction in all that Allah says in the Quran and what the Prophet Muhammad (PBUH) said to his companions, concerning the Afterlife, trials and afflictions in the grave, punishment and reward therein, the bridge to Paradise, and the intercession of the Prophet Muhammad (PBUH).

The Holy Qur'an mentions the Last Day on virtually every page and assigns it a variety of different names, which include: the resurrection, the hour, the Last Day, the Day of Accounting and the Day of the Rising. Some of the major signs of the Last Day is the sun rising from the West, the coming of beasts out of the earth, the coming of Dajjal (what Christians refer to as the Anti-Christ), the descent of Prophet Jesus (PBUH) and the appearance of Gog and Magog (two tribes or nations). True faith in the Last Day propels the believer to liberate himself from the excesses of this world and fashion his life according to what will please Allah, Great and Glorious is He.

Finally, faith in Al-Qada'a Wa Qadar or Divine Preordainment completes one’s Imaan. Al-Qadar is described by God in the Holy Quran: “Verily, all things have We created In proportion and measure (Qadar)” (54:49). Sweet or bitter, good or bad, every believer must believe in Al-Qadar. This aspect of God’s Authority lies in the unseen realm, a realm, which only He, the Exalted and Glorified can access. Thus, true submission is feeling contentment in one’s heart with the knowledge that God has revealed to us everything that we need in this world and what he has kept a secret, we should not embark upon. A man once approached Ali (raa), a companion of the Prophet Muhammad (PBUH) and among the rightly guided. He asked him about Al-Qadar. Ali said: “A dark road, do not follow it”. The man asked again: “Tell me about Al-Qadar?”. Ali replied: “A deep ocean, do not penetrate it. The man again asked: “Tell me about Al-Qadar”, and Ali said: “Allah’s secret, do not embark upon it.”

These are the six bases of Imaan. They are the principles and foundations with which the messengers of God were sent and for which the divine scriptures were revealed. The faith of any person is incomplete without belief in all of them, as the Holy Quran, and the teachings of the Prophet Muhammad (PBUH) have indicated. Furthermore, whoever denies any of these six truths places himself outside the folds of Imaan.

was depicted in movies all the time. You have probably heard about the movie “The Siege” which was released last year around this time. This movie depicted Muslims as being the scum of the earth; that Muslims in New York were fed up with the US and decided to blow up buses and buildings. Finally, the army decides to imprison all Muslims.

Can you imagine a movie about any other minority group being portrayed in this way? Take your pick: Native American, Indian, African American, Italian, etc. There is no way that it could make it to the theaters. But “The Siege” made it. The double standard is blatantly obvious. Of course there’s those that would say the movie was partly based on facts. What facts? All the movie did was take a stereotype and magnify it. Of course there are Muslim extremists, but no more than Christian or Jewish or any other extremists.

I implore the reader to go out and converse with your Muslim colleagues, neighbors, and classmates. It won’t be long before you realize that the average Muslim is just another peace loving human being. In fact, the meaning of Islam and Muslim comes from the Arabic word for peace. As students of an Ivy-league institution we should all be aware of the affects which the media has upon us. Don’t let the television, newspaper, and radio shape your opinion of Muslims or any group for that matter. Make a concerted effort to go beyond the stereotypes. Investigate people on your own, make your own judgements, and accept all people for what they are inside.

My Wednesday night friends

Every Wednesday night, I see the same faces. It's as if we're all connected by a bond we can't explain. They make me feel like I'm part of something special. It's like we're all living in the same world, even if it's just for one night. I'm the youngest person attending my CG, so I'm often considered a "nerd." But I've always enjoyed being around people who share my interests. They inspire me to be more outgoing and confident.

I'm 17 years old and have been attending this CG for three years. I'm not the only one who feels this way. My CG is like a family to me. We support each other through thick and thin. We've been through so much together, from school projects to just hanging out at home.

I've learned so much about myself and others in this CG. It's taught me about responsibility, perseverance, and friendship. I've also made some lifelong memories. The CG has been a truly special experience for me.

Israelis, Palestinians start 'final-status' talks

The two sides hope to finally reach an agreement on issues of Palestinian statehood, control of Jerusalem and refugees.

RAMALLAH, West Bank — Setting a breathless summer 10-year deadline to end the four-decade Israeli occupation, negotiators here began their talks today for a half-century of conflict. Israeli and Palestinian representatives launched landmark talks yesterday with handshakes, endless — and frank acknowledgments that great gaps divide them.

The convening of so-called final-status negotiations in the West Bank town of Ramallah marked the first real attempt by Israel’s new government and the Palestinian leadership to secure Palestinian statehood, the long-term abandonment of the West Bank, the permanent occupation of Jerusalem, the end of hostilities, and the protection of refugees. The talks are expected to last five months, with the deadline set at the end of the year.

Grozny, Russia — Russian infantry reinforcements with tanks and artillery headed toward Chechnya yesterday after being relocated to the region from South Ossetia, where they had been fighting separatists. The reinforcements were reported to have been sent to Gudermes, Chechnya’s second-largest city. Russian forces have been shelling the city for weeks, “and it’s the first time they’ve been able to stop the fighting,” a Chechen military commander said. The Russians were, he said, but did not give up any of the ground they occupied, the commander said. Russian forces hold the northern third of Chechnya, and its ground forces have been slowly pushing in to the city. "The St. John's match was a great match," Meringoff said. "The only difference in the whole match was we were down before we were up. I was really sick and took the whole match.

After a disappointing performance at the Penn Conference Classic last week, Harwood and Meringoff's improvement is all the more remarkable.

Part of the difference may have been the way they prepared for the match. "This time around, we kept saying we weren't going to accept losing, because if you accept losing you can't win," Harwood said. "We tried to set a point at a time and mentally we were prepared.

And, while the duo impressed the medallion by showing how much they had improved, Meringoff — already was. He had seeded sixth and was seeded third at the end of last season.

Penn has long been criticized for fighting the best men but Brown has hardly stopped hustling. Maybe time will be running out in a very close match against Harvard on Saturday, and just when the clock ticks, Pullin's 4-10-yarder into the back of the end.

But there it sat the referee, who will signal that the goal is legal. And this time, there will be no need to hold back Riggie Brown.

 temperament.

The game is on the right direction, and being a part of something like this is going to be really memorable when I look back and see all the memories I've made in a year or so here.

"I don't think I could have one more year. But I'd like a great time and my time's up on this game," he said.

And just like the Lightweight games three years ago, nothing Brown says or does can turn back the clock.

But with two games left on the Quakers schedule, there's still time for one more memory.

Brown has long since been eliminated from the title hunt but Brown has hardly stopped hustling. Maybe time will be running out in a very close match against Harvard on Saturday, and just when the clock ticks, Pullin's 4-10-yarder into the back of the end.

Ivy W. Soccer makes NCAA take in Conn.

By Jessica Tuchinsky

All season long, Penn men's soccer coach George O'Neill has told his players that if they play hard, they will eventually pay off. This weekend, at the ITA Regional Championships, it finally did.

The Quakers sent their top three singles players — sophomores Fanda Stejkal, junior co-captain Erik Sobotka and freshman Ryan Harwood — as well as the No. 1 doubles team of Harwood and senior Brett Meringoff to the tournament at Irvine Auditorium.

And while this weekend was the third time the Red and Blue have ventured into Tigers territory this season, they were a solid 51-23-5.

If Sobotka's performance was disappointing, the rest of the team was excellent.

In the doubles competition Harwood teamed with Ann Ann Liu as the tournament's fifth-seeded tandem.

In the third round, Harwood, Penn's No. 3 in just his first collegiate tennis season, advanced in the third round after beating Bucknell's T. K. Kelly and Dartmouth's Robert Chen, the Big Green's No. 1, 7-6 (7-3), 6-1. "It's been quite a year for us," said John Bouman, Brown's senior and co-captain for the last year. "It took three people to hold Reggie on Saturday.

The statistics speak for themselves. In the RPI rankings, Penn was 10-2 at the beginning of the year; the Ivy League was just 9-11-2. But the selection of Dartmouth, which entered the regional as the 18th-ranked team, is what's exciting. It's a case of barely raised eyebrows among the other coaches, but Dartmouth's depth and quality might be the key.

The selection of the Big Green speaks both to the inexperience of the Ivy League and the parity within the conference. To double overtime before dropping a 1-0 heartbreaker.

Though Nelson is an Ivy League newcomer, there's no question about his credentials or the credentials of the Ivy League's developing very fast into one of the elite conferences in the country. "I think the Ivy League's four invites are not so much a lucky thing as a reward for what the Ivy League has become," Nelson said. "I think the Ivy League's four invites are not so much a lucky thing as a reward for what the Ivy League has become."}

Bigger and better, Mr./Ms. Penn returns to Irvine

Volleyball takes pair in Conn.

But the Quakers finished their regular season by losing to Manhattan for the first time ever.

By Jason Redner

For most of this season, the Penn volleyball team has been making progress. Unfortunately for the Red and Blue, in every two steps they take forward, they seem to drop back one. That is just what happened to the Quakers on Tuesday night as they traveled to Sacred Heart and the Northeast Conference. The Quakers were 11-1, but dropped their final regular season contest. While the Quakers finished their regular season over 300 for the first time since 1986, they will have some work to do in this two-week period prior to the upcoming by League tournaments.

"We really need to work on flashing games and grinding out points," Tenisci reported yesterday. "That's just what we've been working on. We've really been working on blocking and digging, and then we have to really work on getting the ball back from the net," said John Bouman, Brown's co-captain.

The contact's EVPs represent the best and brightest from nearly every corner of the Penn community, including undergraduate students, graduate students, and alumni.

"They really express the best of Penn," Truss said. "There's a measure of discipline, the fitness and the diversity that I think are in the school and not in the community."
