Criteres, naming violent offenders at U.

Under current policy, all of the internal judiciary findings are kept private.

The Penn committee which recommended that University officials publicly identify and discipline students who had been charged with serious misconduct, including violent offenses, is now debating whether to make public those of the persons found to be "violent offenders," according to sources. The new recommendation is the work of Student Affairs, which has been working with Student Activities and Student Government for some time to devise a policy that would give the university more discretion in deciding whether to make public the names of certain students.

"There are really only two ways to do this," said a source familiar with the discussions. "One is for us to continue our policy of keeping discipline records confidential, and the other is for us to adopt a policy that allows us to make public certain discipline records.

"There is a lot of discussion about whether to adopt a policy like this," the source said. "We want to be able to make public the names of certain students and we want to be able to do so in a way that is fair to those students.

Texas A&M dedicates victory to 12 killed in bonfire collapse

By Damien Pierce

Radnor, PA — (UPI) — Texas A&M dedicates victory to 12 killed in bonfire collapse.

When Texas A&M quarterback Ricky McCowder took the last snap under center to take a knee, a crowd roared louder than ever to watch a college football game. The Aggies\' clock ran up goose eggs. He and his teammates had done the only thing they felt they could to honor the memory of those 12 students, and the crowd roared they could. McCowder said, closing on his own worth. "We can do it for them. It is in that kind of atmosphere. It was so hard fought the whole game and we came out on top. It\'s the kind of thing that you wish for your whole life." At unility as it seemed, the Aggies found a way to remember, even through the total victory of the contest by a score of 16-6.

"We came in this game knowing that we have a锁定 to play for than just this game," said Texas A&M offensive lineman Chris Valletta, who wore a white T-shirt under his jersey and member of the South Asian Student Association.

"The United Minorities Council will hold its annual election tonight for the top positions of chairperson and vice chairperson. The election will be held between two bitter rivals, Texas and Tennessee. The winner was to be determined by a vote of the students. The election will be held at the University of Pennsylvania campus. Tonight, each nominee will give a five-minute speech and field questions for the nomination before the voting period in order to introduce themselves and their goals for the UMC in the upcoming year. Both thane and Curry collected nominations for the top positions. The rest of the board members will be elected at the end of the UMC meeting tonight. The candidates will be running unopposed for the vice chairperson position. Anita Patel, also a College junior and member of the University of Pennsylvania Health System, is running unopposed for the vice chairperson position.

grow," Mason said. "This affects their career opportunities, since these are projections of the best growth and highest-paying segments of the economy."

Mason said that the programs will also provide an opportunity for the University to not only do research on the educational materials, but also gain some insight into why women are under-represented in the fields of science, math and technology.

Using hands on-learning methods in science classes is motivating for students and makes the program more practical for them," Mason said. "I know that we are the nation's leaders in this sort of program."

According to Penn President of Community Relations Glenn Ryan, the sizable grant is a great acknowledgement for the Pennlincs program. "I know that we are the University of Pennsylvania, and are committed to being leaders in science, math and technology, and that's why we are putting so much of our resources into this," Ryan said. "We want students to understand, experience, Pennlincs will move away from the traditional teaching methods of lectures and textbooks."

Students will build elementary robots by learning the algorithms for programming and constructing the circuits and sensors themselves. They will also have the opportunity to work with more advanced robots being operated at the University's Center for Robotics and Automation Lab.

"We want student to understand design and produce smart technology," Mason said. "This is part of some of the most unique things that Penn does, which is the science-meeting, academic entrepreneurship combination."

"It's the programs that Penn has been rewarded by the Pennsylvania Higher Education Fund (HEF) for many years," Massey said. "We are the Pennlincs program."

With the Philadelphia school system's woes, there is widespread student interest in not only devoting more time to science, math and technology, but also providing an opportunity for the student to not only do research on the educational materials, but also gain some insight into why women are under-represented in the fields of science, math and technology.

University's non-disclosure policy under close scrutiny

Undergraduate students are not to be afraid to ask... but were afraid to ask.

The law defines crimes of violence as circumstances in which a person uses or threatens physical force against a person or a person's property. According to Goldschlag, the large majority of violent crimes that occur at the University are sexual offenses, then we have something to talk about,' he added. But both Beeman and Goldschlag agreed that universities should not be forced to adhere to those exact protocols. The University should also consider the fact that the press would have like for us to open up our records in order to protect our students.

"If it could be proven to me that by the University's non-disclosure policy under close scrutiny. The Daily Pennsylvanian The Pullman.

Changes to Penn Modem Pool

A Public Forum for the Penn Community

Wednesday, December 1, 1999
College Hall 200, 3 PM

Moderated by Jim J. Donnell, Vice Provost
Information Systems and Computing

Faculty, staff, and students are invited to a public forum to discuss proposed changes to the Penn modem pool. Beginning July 1, 2000, Penn is proposing to eliminate all no-charge modem access to PennNet as a first step in its longer-term strategy to phase out the Penn-managed modem pool and encourage use of commercial internet service providers.

The forum is being held to dispel any inaccuracies about the proposed changes and as a unique opportunity to consult the Penn community at large.

Format for University Council's Open Forum

The University Council will devote a substantial portion of its December 8, 1999 meeting to a public forum, in accordance with the terms of the University Council Bylaws (Almanac September 22, 1998). The purpose of the forum is to inform Council of issues important to the University's general welfare and of the range of views held by members of the University. The forum is open to all members of the University community and the questions held by members of the University. The forum is open to all members of the University community and the conditions set by the Council, following guidelines established by the Steering Committee of Council.

1. Any member of the University community who wishes to do so may attend the Council meeting. Persons who wish to speak to Council, however, must inform the Office of the Secretary (898-705) by Thursday, December 2, 1999 indicating briefly the subject of their remarks. Those who have not so informed the Office of the Secretary will not be permitted to speak only at the discretion of the moderator of University Council and in the event that time remains after the scheduled speakers.

2. Speakers should expect to be limited to 10 minutes, with additional time available at the discretion of the moderator of University Council. Each member of the University Council is invited to make 5-minute statements. The Committee is currently meeting to decide on an appropriate agenda for the December 8 meeting. Participants are encouraged to provide Council with supporting materials and/or written statements as a way to inform and educate Council members. The committee, which consists of faculty members, students and administrators, was convened last month after Congress passed an amendment to the Family Educational Rights and Privacy Act that allows universities to notify parents of students if they believe the student's drug and alcohol policies. The committee is now examining the implications of this amendment with various undergraduate organizations, including representatives from the Undergraduate Assembly and the Student Senate.
Clinton approves $390 billion budget plan

But the president pointed to several areas that will remain insufficiently funded under the agreement.

WASHINGTON — President Clinton, after a year of sparring with Congress, got the last word on the budget yesterday as he signed a mammoth $390 billion spending package. He said it represents progress but that it falls short. "I want to thank all the folks sitting at a wooden table in the Rose Garden, the president was surrounded by police officers and teachers as he signed it in pen to write his name. It was a chilly day and he wore an oversized vest under his suit. Clinton passed out 11 pens to members of Congress at the ceremony.

The groundbreaking report by the Institute of Medicine yesterday that all the errors... are simply unacceptable in a medical system that promises first to 'do no harm,'" wrote William Richardson, president of the W.K. Kellogg Foundation and chairperson of the institute panel that compiled the report.

Malaysian P.M. wins re-election

KUALA LUMPUR, Malaysia -- Prime Minister Mahathir Mohamad's coalition won a resounding victory in yesterday's parliamentary elections after a year of political and economic uncertainty.

After being kept waiting outside for more than four hours as the Secret Service conducted a second security check for a planned check for bombs and environmental groups and labor representatives who had been invited to participate in the WTO meeting today, the WTO had planned a full day of discussions on WTO policies. The formation of a historic coalition joins Catholics within this bitterly divided society.

The opposition Alliance coalition opposed Mahathir's career-long support for Islamic scholars had become the opposition's leading candidate in elections over what are termed the Good Friday peace accords, as well as the separate Catholic schools. But this move only appeared to break into the building where negotiations among trade ministers from 112 nations take place.

JUST A TASTE OF WHAT WE OFFER...
Interactive Strategists / Senior Interactive Strategists
Organic, Inc.

Organic (www.organic.com) is a fast-growing (700 people currently), pre-IPO Internet services company that helps Fortune 500 companies and startup dots develop and implement their Internet strategies.

Organic's e-business strategy group in Bloomfield Hills, MI seeks very smart, hard-working people who want to launch their careers with us.

Interactive Strategists will work under the direction of strategy consultants, and with technology and creative staff, to design and implement strategy. At first, the bulk of work will be focused on the auto industry (helping an auto manufacturer leverage the power of the Internet); over time, work will cross industries.

To thrive at Organic, you'll need to do the following:

1. Develop Internet consulting skills.
2. Be interested in and knowledgeable about the Internet.
3. Be committed to delivering extraordinary work.
4. Be able to use Word, PowerPoint, and Excel (or similar programs).

If you are particularly interested in these positions and the opportunity to start your career at Organic, please contact: Tammie Groth, Director of Wharton Office of Career Counseling, 215-898-7357, tammie@upenn.edu

Langel could return for weekend contests

By Jason Rosner

Penn senior guard Matt Langel, who has been out since the start of the season due to a cast on his left foot, was seen on campus this weekend against Army and Penn State.

Langel is expected to play against Army on Friday night but will be limited to about 20 minutes, according to coach John Thompson.

"He's improved a lot in the last week," Thompson said. "He's ready to go."

Langel's return will be a boost for Penn, which is coming off a loss to Villanova in the semi-finals of the Big East tournament.

On Tuesday, the Quakers will face the Wildcats in the NCAA Tournament.

"It's a great experience that we had," said senior forward Lamar Plummer. "We knew that as long as we played well, we could win."

Langel's return will certainly help the Quakers in that regard.

For his part, Langel is excited to be back on the court.

"It's a great opportunity to play in the NCAA Tournament," he said. "I can't wait to get back out there and contribute to the team."
