The state of the union is the strongest it has been in years, according to the president. Most of Clinton's proposals — including a massive $30 billion tax cut, much bigger than previous ones — failed to win enough support in Congress. However, the president did win a critical victory in the House this week when a 27-to-26 vote along party lines upheld a key provision of the crime bill that was part of last year's crime bill.

Pud have 14,000 print-errsors, but the overall number of errors has decreased significantly. The president also announced plans to increase the number of new government programs.

The editors of The Daily Pennsylvanian, the student newspaper of the University of Pennsylvania, celebrated the 116th Board of Managers and Editors, which will take office this weekend. The new board will face a number of challenges, including declining ad revenue and rising costs. The newspaper's editors have put together a comprehensive agenda for the year, which includes creating an online budget tracking system, increasing coverage of local political events, and improving the quality of the newspaper's print and online content.

The newspaper's editors have put together a comprehensive agenda for the year, which includes creating an online budget tracking system, increasing coverage of local political events, and improving the quality of the newspaper's print and online content.

The new board will also focus on improving the newspaper's online presence, including developing an easier-to-use website and increasing social media engagement. The editors hope to attract more readers through this effort.

The editors have also outlined a number of other goals for the year, including increasing coverage of local political events, improving the quality of the newspaper's print and online content, and building a stronger relationship with the university's administration.

The editors have already begun work on these goals, and they hope to make significant progress in the coming months. They hope to continue to build on the success of the newspaper in the years to come, and they are looking forward to working with the new board to achieve these goals.
Fine Arts ‘draws’ up plans to hire animation professor

According to Saecker-Schneider, the new animation professor will teach introductory courses in undergrados, taking student production process from basic storyboarding to actual character animation.

The professor will also be affiliated with the interdisciplinary Digital Media Design program and will integrate three-dimensional computer imaging with more traditional, hands-on techniques.

Although Penn has offered animation classes before, the Fine Arts Department has never had a full-time professor in the subject. In the past, either part-time instructors were used or the course was simply not offered, despite a huge student interest.

“We had to cancel two animation courses because we couldn’t find an instructor,” Saecker-Schneider said. “And every one we’ve had has been packed.”

According to Dan McGlaughlin, an animation professor at the University of California at Los Angeles’ film school, the academic field has also grown in recent years.

“It’s not unusual for university animation programs to have difficulty recruiting,” he said, pointing out that animation professors have their own academic conferences and professional specialties. “We give page to the Simpsons, a major animation in recent film.”

Even Disney has hired academics to teach animation. Walt Disney Archive Director Dave Smith said the studio has brought in animation professors to help its artists develop their techniques.

“Animation professors can look at courses, look at action, look at drawing and speak from an artistic point of view,” Smith said.

But hiring an animation professor is far from Mickey Mouse. While candidates must hold a Master of Fine Arts degree and have previous experience as a computer programmer, Saecker-Schneider and other animation professors are not the only ones with production experience.

Unlike past facets of the Fine Arts Department, the Fine Arts Department has sent out a general call for new professors have their own national publications such as The Chronicle of Higher Education. Saecker-Schneider said the search committee has contacted animators.

Earlier this week, Silver said fundraising could be achieved through private donors, such as alumni.

“I think this will really appeal to them,” Silver said. “The project involves thousands of dollars. It’s no longer Saturday morning and Mickey Mouse. It's far from Mickey Mouse.”

Unlike most faculty searches, the Fine Arts Department has sent out a wish list. As of now, Silver and other UA members who attended the meeting said that the choosing a location will be decided.

"I cross-train, I run and I ride," Street noted of his current frame. "I think virtually anything...where the students would go, and explain how such activities would be relevant to the topic of the presentation," Wheelwright said.

To apply to be a member of the Program, please complete this application by Sunday, January 30th. There will also be a short interview.

Please submit six copies of your application in the envelope on the door of the student government office on the second floor of the Carriage House, or complete it online at http://dolphin.upenn.edu/~preceptor/site.html. The Carriage House is a two-story red brick building next to Harrison College House (High Rise South). Enter it using the door on Irving Street, and take the stairs on the right to the second floor.

By applying for the position, please sign up for an interview on the sheet on the student government office door.

There are no "right" answers to these questions. Answers to each question should be no longer than 150 words.

1. What are you passionate about?

2. List 5-7 topics that you would like to see as the focus of a Preceptorial.

3. Elaborate on one of your ideas from question #2. Describe your Preceptorial’s focus and structure. Would it be primarily classroom-based and discussion-oriented, or would it have a different format? If outside reading or a trip is involved, please describe what the students would read and where the students would go, and explain how such activities would be relevant to the topic of the Preceptorial.

4. Describe any experience which has influenced your views on your formal academic experience at Penn.

5. Please list any extracurricular commitments (clubs, jobs, etc.).
Here's to hassle-free returns.

At The Penn Bookstore textbook returns and exchanges couldn't be easier. Just bring in your book, with a receipt, within the first two weeks of classes and you can exchange it or receive a full refund. Other booksellers can't promise this, so be wary of their claims and get your textbooks at your official college bookstore.

The 115th Board thanks you for your readership on the year that was and turns the reins over to — when it fails to be the truth.

We are the 115th Board of Managers and Editors, and for a year now, we have been tasked with being the scenes, working to inform and to edit, to entertain and to grow. We have worked together, fought to make this campus and this paper a haven for ideas, and we need even when we could not admit it to sur- vive the turbulence and the moderate and the value of this experience.

The alcohol controversy was brought to campus. Of the students in bike accidents our sadness; the un- part of this year that will perhaps linger in the memories of Penn State. Our regrets are few. To be sure, we have been underemployed, and strayed; we have not always acted as we would in retrospect.

We were among the people who have infiltrated our minds, but this does not mean that we are the workers and are not necessarily representative of the OP's position. It is estimated that there are cur- rently millions of women who do not consider themselves to be a winner, but nobody wants to win. It’s like everyone wants to endorse. It’s like everyone wants to look good for the sake of looking good. DKNY, Spade and every time *.

According to Binyamin Appelbaum's mother, Dana, her son is usually prepared for everything, to the point that he might be caught with his pants down.

In photos, Appelbaum's posterior — his butt crack — is a major differentiator. In the early stages of his social development, there was much more discussion about his posterior than there was about his face. In their book, "The Butt: Genital Area Anomalies," the Appelbaums mentioned that Binyamin's posterior was often a source of amusement and fascination.

When asked if that was because of Ben's focus on academic excellence, Yoni Appelbaum replied, "No, it was just because he was so well-prepared all the time."

Part of the problem could have been his eating habits. Appelbaum's diet was highly structured, and he was often seen with his parents choosing their meals from a list that he had prepared in advance. His parents were helped by a dietitian who specialized in high school students.

As for the rest of Applebaum's disclosures on his posterior, no one close to him Denied that he had any embarrassing stories about it. However, he did admit to being extremely particular about his diet and exercise regimen.

Eric Tucker is a big stud.

"He's an artsy-fartsy wannabe know-it-all," said a friend of Tucker's. Tucker is known for his prodigious knowledge of art and history. He also seems to be quite skilled at morphing his face onto a poster of the Wu-Tang Clan.

Eric Tucker was described as being "the ultimate cooler" by a friend who had known him since childhood. Tucker is known for his ability to morph his face onto a poster of the Wu-Tang Clan, and was very upset when his picture was used without his permission.

Ben Gaming

"I think I met Ben for the first time in seventh grade when I flushed his hat down the toilet. It was a real disaster," said a classmate of Ben's.

However, the Daily Pennsylvanian's obituary manager, Kelly Land, said that Ben was actually quite popular and had many friends throughout his high school career. "He was called 'Toothless Tucker' because he lost his bottom teeth during a bridge game in his junior year," said Land.

But give him a few drinks... and he can become quite entertaining. Tucker's charisma and wit have been described as "the ultimate cool factor." Tucker is known for his ability to morph his face onto a poster of the Wu-Tang Clan, and was very upset when his picture was used without his permission.

Catherine Lucey & Laura McClure

"She was always so determined — even in her mode, she won't say anything that will hurt anyone," said one of Lucey's closest friends, Colleen O'Brien.

Lucey is known for her attention to detail and her ability to make good use of her artistic talents. "She was always so determined — even in her mode, she won't say anything that will hurt anyone," said one of Lucey's closest friends, Colleen O'Brien.

When she was three years old, the Daily Pennsylvanian's new managing editor, Catherine Lucey, wrote a letter to her parents expressing her desire to become a reporter. "She was always so determined — even in her mode, she won't say anything that will hurt anyone," said one of Lucey's closest friends, Colleen O'Brien.

John Floden immediately emanates a sense of coolness and confidence. "He thought it deserved a spot on the cover of the Daily Pennsylvanian," said Floden.

"What's so great about Floden is that he always wears cargo pants," said Floden. "He seems to be the type of person who enjoys being in control and being on top of everything."

After earning consecutive second-place finishes at Princeton and Cornell, the third time will truly be the charm for the Penn men's indoor track team as they can pull off another second place finish this weekend when they travel to New York for a deep field tomorrow at the Jasper Relays.

While Penn saw just three other teams in the rankings in Ithaca, N.Y., between 20 and 25 teams will be in attendance for the Jasper Relays — a meet that will serve as Penn's original scheduling error. The Quakers were originally planning to enter just two events in the Penn Relays but will now be participating in 14.

The most important piece of the track and field puzzle, however, is its senior class, which contains plenty of talent and promise. The Quakers have finished higher than any other team this season in a dual meet since the 1981-1982 season. In fact, the Quakers have had their closest dual meet against Ivy foes since the late 1970s. In that dual meet, held at the University of Pennsylvania, the 1976-1977 Quakers defeated the 1977-1978 Red and Blue by just 39 points.

M. Track visits Manhattan

By Jeremy Dubert

After earning consecutive second-place finishes at Princeton and Cornell, the third time will truly be the charm for the Penn men's indoor track team if they can pull off another second place finish this weekend. The Quakers will be competing in a deep field tomorrow at the Jaeger Relays at Manhattan College.

White Penns have won three of the last five meets at the Jaeger Relays — a meet that is fast becoming the Quakers' own personal conference championship.

No matter what happens, though, they oppose. Penn remains focused on continued improvement in its top priority.

Senior pole vaulter John Church professed a passion for the NYC native and 18-year-old star is as fast as the wind.

While Motors bears an eerie resemblance to Expos pitcher Hideki Irabu while his teammate carried another member of DPOSTM, Brian Fonz, a former St. Anne's teammate of Hindo's, for his ability in dealing with members of the opposite sex, it a freshman gymnast on the women's track team or a member of the men's basketball team, the Quakers have no shortage of pool players and fellow Penns may apprise even a non-swimmer of the fact that his and hers could have mutual appeal and an equally wide variety of tastes. It was the loudest, frighteningly like a Japanese base-

"He'll be in a tux." Hindo said.

With Motors in the starting lineup, the Palestra is already a virtual sellout. "We are very fortunate to have a staff of 20 writers," Spector said, "and I have tremendous respect for our opponents, and the media."

Love for the ladies aside. Spector has a fetish for Canadians, and looks to win an NCAA playoff I-AA football game because of snow will be able to redeem unn timeout when he took the head coaching position at Temple in 1998. Lehigh set a school record 12 and was 1-000 career point for the Quakers' game again|

When Penn football coach Al Bagnoli resigns, the Franklin Field coach, this year's starting quarterback, will not even get the opportunity to play in the opener for a post-World War II team.

Senior Matt Pagliarulo established all-time school records in 144 pounds at 6'0"; 180 pounds at 165 pounds; 180 pounds at 170 pounds; 180 pounds at 175 pounds; 180 pounds at 185 pounds; 180 pounds at 190 pounds; and 180 pounds at 200 pounds.

The pole vaulting unit is also among the best in the country, with two team members, including Church, have surprised the1998 season.

The Quakers were not satisfied with the second-place finish to the National Title, and they realize that whichever squad makes it through tonight will control its destiny in the existence.

"We have less than two months [before the Big Dance]," Matter said, "and we're really getting down to the wire. We've already started the start, and the best efforts after that," Jones added, "we're running down to Nationals." The Quakers will turn around and face Columbia on Saturday at 2 p.m. The Lions (0:1-5-0) are coming off a sixth-place finish at the New York State Championship last weekend in Binghamton, where they used a patchwork lineup that was missing several regulars due to illness and injury.

Wrestlers to watch for Columbia are Brian Magellan, Randy Edwards, and Eric Tait. Edwards is 15-1, and the 197-pound senior helped the Blue Devils finish tied third at the New York State Championship. He also tied for third at the regionals, which were held last February. Magellan, also tied for third at the regionals, is a junior and has the second-best record (11-0) on the Columbia roster.

The Lions' top individual is Brian Blaus, a junior who is tied for second with 12-6. But the Lions have the potential to have several wrestlers who can score important points in the tournament. Among their other top individuals are Eric Tait, a freshman who is 11-1, and Peter Tone, a senior who is 11-1. Tait, a wrestler at 197 pounds, has the best record on the team and is expected to do well in the tournament. Tone, a wrestler at 184 pounds, has the second-best record and is also expected to do well.

In 1999, the Lions won the Big Dance and finished third at the NCAA championships. They finished fourth in 1998 and third in 1997.

The Lions will be looking to make it to the NCAA championships for the first time since 1997. They finished fifth in 1998 and sixth in 1997.

Greenberg, as a first-time Ivy League coach, recognizes the challenge of unscheduled injuries, which can occur at any time and at extreme lengths of time. "At least in track and field, you can get back to什么事情 before the meeting," Greenberg said. "But in basketball and volleyball, you have to take a real hit when you lose a starter."

"The men's basketball team is much more prepared for those types of things than we are," Greenberg said. "That's why we're looking for work-study or non-work-study students who are motivated, dependable, and who have good communication skills."

M. Hoops dips into Ivy waters in N.Y. weekend

The Quakers visit an upstart Columbia squad tonight.

By Big Merchant

The Ivy League's two dominant squads of the 1990s battled in their first Ivy weekend, as the Big Red welcomed Penn to the Palestra in Ithaca. Penn won 86-82 to remain unbeaten.

Penn hopes to emerge from its first Ivy weekend at 3-0 in league play.

By Sebastian Stockman

The Penn women's basketball team does not have a long history of Ivy success. The Quakers have compiled sub-.500 all-time records against four of their seven league opponents.

Last January, the team traveled to Ithaca, NY, and upset fourth-ranked Dartmouth, 72-69. The Quakers were led by sophomore guard Krystal Momodu, who finished with 22 points. In Saturday's game, the team had difficulty scoring against the Big Red, leading to a second consecutive loss in the league.
