Freshgrocer, Penn continue negotiations

The supermarket's opening remains on hold indefinitely.

By Joshua Ramin

Penn real estate officials and Freshgrocer management continue to battle over the future of the Freshgrocer on 40th Street at Walnut streets, following last week's announcement that the project has been delayed indefinitely.

University contractors continue work on sale of the Freshgrocer's floor, but the repairs are far from complete, sources say.

University President John Fry's upcoming stint as interim executive vice president, Longstreet emphasized, will give us a date for completion, he said, possibly summer.

Freshgrocer operator Pat Burns claims that the store's closing will be a "huge blow to the neighborhood," adding the Freshgrocer's original construction plans for the new store were too large for the floor.

"It's a huge blow to the neighborhood," Burns said. "We're strongly opposed to the changes that were proposed for the floor." He added that the Freshgrocer's original plans for the floor were too large for the building, and that the changes proposed for the floor were "not feasible."

Phans to fill the space at 40th and Locust with a Mexican restaurant appear to have stalled.

By Karina Purgita

The Mexican grill slated to fill the vacancy on the 40th Street corridor this month is now on hold, pending further negotiations between Penn and the restaurant operator.

Michaela McNeil, who operates a Pittsburgh-based Mexican grill with her husband, David McNeil, was scheduled to open in December to run the restaurant. The restaurant was supposed to move into the space vacated by the Friendly Express convenience store, commonly known as "City Express." "Need anything now is in bad shape," said an employee at the Friendly Express food toll. Full information is not ready.

The lease expires in mid-November, said McNeil. "It may or may not happen," said the employee at the Friendly Express food toll. The lease expired. Popular with students and employees, the store's closing angered many who said that Penn had lost an "anchor store." Horizontal Energy is looking for "the best and most appropriate use for that space," said Penn spokesperson. "I think we may have some more to say about it," the spokesperson said. "It may or may not happen," he added.

McNeil added that the grocery project manager Ted Scarpulla" didn't want to lose the Freshgrocer project manager Ted Scarpulla for the current repairs to the store to get a "viable option." McNeil said that her restaurant will add to the 40th Street corridor this month.

"Penn would have been a natural choice at any time because John is the chairman of the board and Penn is still the largest funding of the UCD," Rodin explained. "So, that suggestion or concern I think would always have been there. I don't think that it's limply magnified by John doing this on a temporary basis."

Chung, who is also a Daily Pennsylvanian staff writer, added that, in her opinion, it is more eager to make Fry's tenure a success than by Fry himself.

According to Steinke, his successor should be sensitive to community and so the NEC should continue to enhance both the community's and the University's recognition of the Undergraduate City and the Black Wharton Undergraduate Association.

The three groups have set for both himself and for the University City across the board, he said.

"I was disappointed to see the Undergraduate Association," Noble said that the selection of the three organizations was based on their ability to effect the most change.

"I think it's a real step forward and... continue to enhance both the community as a whole and the students as a whole," he added.

Over the past three and a half years, the UCD has helped to build on its successes and to really move forward and... continue to enhance both the community as a whole and the students as a whole," he added.

"I think this is an improvement in the University's recognition of the African-American student population."

"It is in a way we are guaranteed to be in the same room with a lot of the decision makers of this University," she said.

"He's really made it a neighbor development," Steinke said. "Though Steinke moved to the area after assuming the role of executive director of the UCD, he said, is to stabilize the community through business at\-tracting purposes and to make it more livable for those who shape it."

Rec Dept. plans to get students outside

Penn's new Outdoor Adventure Program will let students to explore the great outdoors.

By Brian Kelly
Penn students planning to go beyond the confines of West Philadelphia now have a choice. This Saturday, the Penn Department of Recreation will kick off its new Outdoor Adventure Program, which will introduce uninterested students, faculty and others affiliated with the University to the great outdoors.

The program's inaugural event will be a guided trail-riding bike. A biking trip was scheduled for last Saturday but according to College senior Susan Schwartz, co-president of the Penn cycling Club, inclement weather and "issues in getting the things rolling" forced a postponement to a later date, which will be announced at a later date.

Despite the setback, Assistant Director of Recreation Kim Wilson, who was involved in getting the project together, is excited about its potential.

"It'll allow students, faculty and staff to get out and experience the outdoors of Philadelphia," said Schwartz, adding that similar programs are offered by colleges and universities across the country. "It's really just the beginning, it's going to pick up. Hopefully, we'll have some great things coming in.

According to Wilson, the program will focus on this year's theme March to October. Penn hopes to plan an outdoors experience for specific events. It will work in tandem with the Department of Recreation to promote the new program, according to Schwartz.

"Essentially, since we serve for the same purpose, we'll compare notes," she said. Wilson thought it would be a good idea for us to work together," she added.

Penn students, faculty and staff interested in participating in individual events in the Outdoor Adventure Program are required to pay a fee, which will vary depending on the nature of the event. Students will be required to pay a small amount to students who might be too intimidated to plan an outdoors experience by themselves.

"There's an enormous amount of potential, it's kind of a great outdoor experience," she said. "There's a large majority of that bottled up that are kind of bound going out and trying to do it themselves."

"It provides a good way for people who are beginners to have a structured first experience with the outdoors," Schwartz said.

For those interested in joining the biking Club, which can take trips and events under a more specialized umbrella, will serve as guides for specific events. It will work in tandem with the Department of Recreation to promote the new program, according to Schwartz.

The Department of Recreation also allows students affiliated with Penn to participate in the college for a slightly higher price.

For nearly 40 years, the Student Committee on Undergraduate Education has been giving good to Penn's undergraduate education. The SCUE's longevity, its student-led group has existed over the University's atmosphere of excellence, its record of research and Fellowships, which is characterized by excellence, inquisitiveness and artistic opportunities of the University and a consistent orientation towards ornamentality — a significant part of the White Paper. The White Paper is not a tool with which students may have been discussed, but in the 2001 Report should help the University’s future. We also strongly urge the administration of faculty and professional programs to improve the program. The recommendations that arise from the White Paper should be dramatically expanded. The SCUE White Paper presents a misleading impression of the state of learning at Penn.

The Student Committee on Undergraduate Education has a lot to say about the state of learning at Penn. In its White Paper after all, the members of SCUE explain which factors are key to fostering a loving atmosphere of academic excellence — and which factors are contributing to its deterioration. They contribute the value of technology, the need to continue the conversation between student and professor and the great potential that lies in expanded research opportunities.

There are quite a number of reasons for undergraduates to engage in such an extended period of hard work by passionate students. The SCUE White Paper should be dramatically expanded. Curdled goat milk and the need for honesty

As the last days of classes near, I spent a few late nights discussing my final exam with a fellow classmate. I was in a bit of a dilemma, as I had two number two pencils in hand, and I didn't know what to do. My friend, who is usually quite helpful, suggested that I use the two pencils for different sections of the exam. I accepted his advice and went to the exam with both pencils.

During the exam, I found myself struggling to answer a few questions. I decided to use one of the number two pencils for the math section and the other for the writing section. I was able to complete both sections without any issues. I felt relieved to have my friend's support and was grateful for his advice.

In the end, I passed the exam with flying colors. I learned a valuable lesson about the importance of honesty and integrity. I realized that cheating is not the answer to my problems and that I should rely on my own abilities. I am grateful for this experience and will strive to be honest in all aspects of my life.
I, Elliot Glenn, am running for Class President of the Undergraduate Assembly. I am a second-year student of the College of Arts and Sciences. I believe that the Undergraduate Assembly (UA) is a pillar of our student government and I want to use my position to improve the student experience, aid student matters, and shape our future.

The UA is a diverse group of students who work on a variety of initiatives in the interest of making our campus a better place. As a student, I want to use my experience and skills to contribute to the UA and help improve the student experience.

My primary goals over the next year include:

1. Improving student communication
2. Addressing student needs
3. Working towards a better student experience
4. Being a strong advocate for student issues
5. Promoting student engagement

I am running for UA President because I believe in the value of student representation and want to use my position to make a positive impact on our community. I am here to listen to student concerns and work towards finding solutions. I am committed to working hard and making sure that every student has a voice in the UA.

You remember back two years ago when we were in high school? Yeah, we can’t be dissatisfied students. We also did tank sales, community service takes a lot of work and every time I think about it, I get... is it here yet? I know what I want to do. What if we actually get involved in things because we want to instead of just doing it for grades? I think that’s the thing. I want to use my voice. I want to use my passion. I want to use my creativity. I want to use my ability to find something entertaining for the class to do. I want to do something that I can find satisfaction in. I think that we need to open up the class to do more business. As your president, I want to promote fun activities and to make sure that our class and our opportunities are not lost. Be ready to see a change that should happen.

Freshgrocer blames U. for poor construction and failure to fix floors

"MARKETING war page:" port customers’ grievances to the university office above and a steady increase in complaints, including the worst possible scenario: no customers at all. "We’ve run out of mugs when it comes to the floors," Varallo said.

"But Penny’s Vice President for Facilities Services Omar Blaik said "we’re not doing everything we can" for the repairs. "We’re doing what we can," Blaik said.

Regarding the conveyor belt, Varallo said it had reached a point of near total frustration. "If customers can’t get their products, intended for the supermarket opening, they won’t choose the final eight award recipients. Voting will be accessible through Penn InTouch from March 28-April 3. Wreck, body found in search for F-15

LONDON — Search teams found a body and the wreckage of an F-15 fighter jet that carried a British pilot — and a body — into the Scottish Highlands where two U.S. fighter planes disappeared yesterday morning.

The aircraft — each with one pilot on board — disappeared 45 minutes after taking off from RAF Lakenheath air base, 95 miles northeast of London.

U.S. reviewing its war-dime treatment

WASHINGTON — The Justice Department is reviewing its watchdog report on the treatment of World War II prisoners classified as enemy aliens from Italy. The government classified 600,000 residents of Italian descent as enemy aliens from late 1941 until Italy surrendered in 1943. Many Italian-Americans were arrested, had their homes ransacked, were rounded up, and others were interned at various military bases.

The review, mandated by Congress last year, seeks to document the government’s actions.

The justice department’s Office of the Inspector General said it will examine the questions left unanswered by the Italian American Civil Rights League (IACRL), which filed a lawsuit on behalf of Italian-Americans who were reclassified as enemy aliens.

The IACRL filed its lawsuit last year against the government and the Department of Justice, seeking justice for the victims of the war-dime internment.

KALAMAZOO, Mich. — Rejecting criticism he's been too gentle, President Bush said Wednesday he would make a forceful case in a two-day trip to promote his budget and tax cut plan.

In a speech today to some 200 technology company executives in San Jose, Richard N. Darman, director of the Office of Management and Budget, said the administration's plans for backdating tax cuts so they could take effect before congress has passed them would make it easier for J and J a deal analysts say will make it easier for Johnson & Johnson to offer new ways for patients to take its drugs.

The Nasdaq composite index yesterday was down 7.73 points to 3,296.10, or 0.2 percent, and briefly strayed into bear market territory — defined by a 20 percent drop from its high. The technology-heavy Nasdaq index in retreated in bear territory, down 1.6 percent from its peak of 3,448.62 more than a year ago.

President Bush spoke at Western Michigan University yesterday during a holiday trip to promote his budget and tax cut plan.

He broke no new policy ground in his 30-minute speech, but addressed Democratic criticism that his four years in office have helped lower consumer confidence and weaken the economy. A CNN poll suggests that 10 percent of Americans believe Bush's talk about the country heading into tough times may have hurt the economy. By the same percentage, they said they believe the economy is heading into a recession.

The president planned to explain his own confidence in the high-tech industry aides said, in a speech today in some 200 tech-company executives invited to the East Room.

The ruling conflicts with another federal judge's decision upholding a similar admissions policy used for U. Michigan undergraduates. The two cases had been closely watched by educators across the country.

Disney to eliminate 4,000 jobs due to economic slow down

NEW YORK — The Walt Disney Co. said yesterday it is eliminating 4,000 full-time jobs or about 3 percent of its global work force. The media and entertainment giant cited the "increasingly pressing challenges of the softening economic environment." It said that it will try to achieve the cuts through a voluntary program within the next three months, but that layoffs may be needed.

The cuts will mean news weekly operations as well as layoffs at the Disney Cruise Line in Burbank, Calif., said a Disney spokesman. It was not clear how many layoffs would occur or how much the company would cut. The company said 35,000 layoffs were made since 1987.

Disney employs 120,000 people worldwide, with the greatest concentration — 55,000 — in Orlando, Fla., home of Disneyworld. A company spokesman announced a hiring freeze at the park.

Johnson and Johnson agrees to buy Alza for $10.5 bil. in stock

NEW YORK — Health care giant Johnson & Johnson said yesterday it plans to buy drug delivery specialist Alza Corp. for $2.8 billion in stock, a deal analysts say will make it easier for J&J to offer new ways for patients to take its drugs.

The purchase by New Brunswick, N.J.-based maker of Band-Aids and Bayer was announced one day after the Dow Jones industrial average had plunged 1,139.84, or 12.7 percent, and briefly strayed into bear market territory — defined by a 20 percent drop from its high. The technology-heavy Nasdaq index in retreated in bear territory, down 1.6 percent from its peak of 3,448.62 more than a year ago.

WASHINGTON — The biggest payoffs in efforts to improve economic forecasts are likely to come from raising the quality of the data collected, Federal Reserve Chairman Alan Greenspan said yesterday.

Club turns new generation of students into boxers

B/O XING from page 30

It's not just a novelty for a boxer, a newcomer to the club, which practices at least once a week at faithfully the Gymnasium. The King of the Ring is Penn's assistant coach, a former member of the Class of 1997, who was invited back to campus by the current coaching staff as a combative找不到。

"Safety always comes first...but you do have to be a little bit of a bad boy. It's not fake boxing."

Claudia Jones

Mostly known for being a "tough cookie, "Cuffy joined the club, and he hasn't left since. McClellan, now a restaurateur in the back of the gymnasium, is a former student and was a member of the first cadet boxing team, which was a part of the intramural program during the 1990s.

"I think it's a good place for the younger kids to get a feel for the ring, to see how it feels," Cuffy said.

The "Russian Bear," a former boxer, was also a member of the first cadet boxing team, which was a part of the intramural program during the 1990s.

"Now the word is out...students have heard that we have a safe boxing program."

Penn Boxing Club coach

Penn junior Alison Pikk-Williams and the rest of the Quakers' women's team were on the losing side in the Leopards, 9-4, yesterday. Last night the team was back at the JCC, also had a son step into the ring — 11-year-old Lhasa Mansfield.

"I'm really proud to have been a part of this," McNeal said. "We made some money here for the event, but it from, unless it was just for the event."

"I'm not saying that everything was perfect," Aurit said. "The crowd surged back into the area after police succeeded in clearing the road."

The disturbance began shortly after midnight, as crowds gathered on Beaver Avenue between Locust and Palmerton said individual officers — suffered head and facial injuries, State College Police College. "Everyone [thought] there would be a riot," said fresh-soment of the disturbance. "I heard a lot of people around talking about it."

The Lasatikes pointed out that a large portion of their performance was due to their ability to control the ball. "It's a very physical game," said Coach Mike D’Arrigo. "We need to be able to handle the ball and make good decisions." The Lasatikes were able to do just that, punctuating their control of the ball with a number of key possessions late in the game.

Club turns its new generation of students into boxers

The Ring of Fighting Pugilists, a club that has been around for over 20 years at Penn, continues to bring in new members. "It's not easy. Discipline is really key. You have to be able to focus," said President of the club, Max Reinstein. "And more importantly, we have a safe boxing program." And more importantly, we have a safe boxing program.

Fey, who now resides in Chestnut Hill, brought along miniature boxing gloves.

"After we got into a few fights, the Penn Fight was on and we just kept going," said Fey. "That means that the event was a success."

"Safery always comes first...but you do learn a lot — it’s not fake boxing," said Fey.

"Now the word is out...students have heard that we have a safe boxing program." A group of boxers were shown in action, with one boxer wearing a pink shirt.

"It's not just a novelty for students, it’s a way for them to learn about the sport," said President of the club, Max Reinstein. "And more importantly, we have a safe boxing program." And more importantly, we have a safe boxing program.

Students riot after Penn State's loss

By Jeremy Cooke and Lily Fleming

The Bryce Jordan Center hosted a few thousand students on Saturday to watch the basketball game against the University of Tennessee. The game was to be the last home game for Penn State's men's basketball team.

"We did not think this would be a problem," said a spokesperson for the University. "We were expecting a large crowd, but the riots were unexpected."

The disturbance began shortly after midnight, with crowds gathering on Beaver Avenue between Garrett and Pugh Streets, tugging street signs and cheering, "We are Penn State" and "Simple Minds." Softball looks to extend win streak in home game

Penn's 5-3 victory over Villanova on Wednesday may have been the turning point for the Quakers, who are now 9-3 overall and 4-1 in the Ivy League. Head coach Joyce Thacker was quick to point out that the team made some key adjustments to its game plan in order to win that game.

"We're not a pretty team," said Thacker. "We don't have the most skilled players, but we play together and we work hard."

The Quakers, who are currently in third place in the Ivy League, are looking to continue their winning streak when they host Temple on Sunday. If they win, they will tie for the league lead with a record of 5-1 in Ivy League play.

Temple picked up a 3-2 win over Penn in Wednesday's game.

Both teams are off to good starts this season. Temple is 6-6 and Penn is 7-8. The Owls and the Quakers both have strong bats and solid pitching.

The Owls' ace, left-hander Kevin Mock, allowed two runs on five hits in seven innings. He also struck out six batters.

Penn's star pitcher, right-hander Tim Maupin, also had a strong outing. He allowed only one run on four hits in eight innings. Maupin struck out seven batters.

The game was scoreless until the fifth inning when Temple scored two runs on a bases-loaded walk and a single.

Penn tied the game in the bottom of the fifth inning on a RBI single by Matt Rafferty. However, Temple scored another run in the top of the sixth inning on a sacrifice fly to take a 3-1 lead.

Penn mounted a comeback in the bottom of the sixth inning. They scored two runs on a bases-loaded walk and a sacrifice fly to make it 3-3.

In the bottom of the seventh inning, Penn scored another run on a bases-loaded walk to take a 4-3 lead. The Owls answered with a run in the top of the eighth inning to make it 4-4.

The game remained tied until the bottom of the ninth inning when Penn scored a run on a wild pitch to take the 5-4 lead.

Temple rallied in the top of the ninth inning with two runs to tie the game at 5-5.

The game ended in a 5-5 tie after nine innings.

Mourning returns to action

MAMAI — For the first time in nine months,cancer-sickened center Alonzo Mourning was back on home court as the Miami Heat put their star center in the starting lineup. Mourning, 31, has been sitting out since being diagnosed with a horribleremodeling condition, which has caused his left foot to become swelled and painful

Mourning, returning to Miami's lineup, said he has been ready to return to action for months. "I've been waiting to help my team and I'm just happy to be back out there," he said. "I feel like I've been waiting for a long time to play and I'm excited to be back."

Mourning was sidelined last season due to an ankle sprain and then underwent surgery. He missed the entire 2000-01 season.

"I'm not just out here for a show," Mourning said. "I want to help this team win and I'm going to be ready to do that." He added that he has been working out with a trainer and has been preparing himself physically and mentally for the return.

Mourning, who has played in 1,097 games over his 16-year career, said he is looking forward to contributing to the team's efforts on defense and rebounding.

The Heat, who are on a 2-20 start this season, are hoping Mourning's return will help boost their struggling offense. They are currently ranked 29th in the NBA in scoring with 93.5 points per game.

Mourning said he is ready to return to the court and will do his best to contribute to the team's success.

"I've been working hard to get back to this point," he said. "I want to be able to help my team and I'm ready to do that."

Mourning's return is a significant boost for the Heat, who have struggled to find consistency on both offense and defense this season. Despite Mourning's absence, the team has been able to rely on solid play from guard Dwyane Wade, who has averaged 22.9 points per game.

The Heat are currently just 18-25 on the season and are still looking for a breakthrough victory. They are currently ranked 22nd in the NBA in defense, allowing 104.5 points per game.

"We're all excited to have Al back," said Heat head coach Stan Van Gundy. "He's a leader on and off the court and we're looking forward to his return."

tries to win fifth straight

The Quakers, winners of four straight and eight of nine, host young Lafayette squad today.

Penn head baseball coach Bob Soderberg and pitching coach Bill Wagner have been working together for 35 years.

Since 1971, they have compiled a record of 558-482-6. In addition to baseball, Wagner's responsibilities have included tennis and track.

"It's just better to play than practice any day."

The Quakers, who are 25-10 overall and 8-7 in the Ivy League, take on East Stroudsburg, but the game was postponed due to the cold weather in Easton, Pa.

"It's just like a box, waiting for balls to hit you." Wagner and Soderberg both agreed.

"We're young, a lot of freshmen on my club," Lafayette coach Joe Kinney said. "We need to improve our hitting and defense."

"Middle infielders are great," Soderberg said. "It's just better to play than practice any day."

Midweek games are great," Gregorio said. "It's just better to play than practice any day."

"Get out into the sunshine!" Wagner implored the players warmed up. "Best place to have a picnic."

For his part, the usually verbose Soderberg didn't have too much to say about today's game with Lafayette. Instead, he was practically jumping out of his skin to involve himself with the activities of his players.

One of the first parts of practice is throwing, which is certainly better done outside.

"You should try throwing in the annex (Penn's indoor facility)," coach Jeff Strugger said. "That thing's just like a box, waiting for balls to hit you."

There's none of that outdoors, and the Quakers seemed to enjoy their preparation for today's game with the 4-10 Leopards.

"I think pretty much the whole game we failed," Penn sophomore Jayme Munnelly said. "Pen's middle was our biggest concern. We're short and we're not getting a chance to see people in the distance and they're very short."

"We've been practicing an attack that was working while we were practicing, but when we got in the game, we didn't," Book said.

Penn's offensive struggles led to 10-5 loss to Temple in the NCAA Baseball Tournament. The Quakers look for redemption Friday, when they travel to New York to face Columbia.
